EASTERN NEWS.

The Old, Old Story of Ben Butler and His Peachant for Spoons.

Confirmation of the Agreement Between the O. R. & N. and the Union Pacific

For an Interchange of Through Traffic from the East to Portland.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

OMAHA, Feb. 27. — Assistant General Manager [illegible]ball, of the Union Pacific, who returned from New York to-day, confirms the report of the agreement between the Oregon Railway and Navigation company and the Union Pacific for a ten year contract of an interchange of through traffic to Portland, via the Oregon Short Line. The meeting point of the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation company's railway has been fixed in the valley of the Snake river. Sleeping cars are to run from Omaha to Portland without change. The two roads are to be completed to the junction by December 31st, this year. Work on both lines is being rapidly pushed. Winter camps are being maintained on the Oregon Short Line for a distance of fifty miles. The Wood River branch, [illegible] to Hailey, Idaho, will be completed [illegible] summer.

The Old, Old Story.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 27.—Recently the Chronicle of this city published the following story: When ex-Governor [illegible], of Massachusetts, was on the floor of the [illegible] exchange last week, with ex-President [illegible], of the exchange, he told him this story of [illegible] to the office of governor of Massachusetts [illegible] and honor Butler with the title of [illegible] of "General." He deserves [illegible], sir, he is to-day, I suppose, using a [illegible] spoons stolen from New Orleans. [illegible] by this time, for if he [illegible] he did down in New Orleans they [illegible] twenty years. The [illegible] were owned by my father-[illegible], and there wasn't a better span [illegible] confiscated, of course, [illegible] one of them during his stay, [illegible] their old home. One day [illegible] them on a side street. [illegible] Newman's gate inside of five [illegible] their old stalls. Of [illegible] could get them [illegible] old groom was overawed, [illegible] quarters. I saw the team [illegible] vessel bound for Boston [illegible] hat racks and [illegible] furniture. The paper [illegible] to Gov. Butler by the [illegible], and to-day's Chronicle [illegible]:

"[illegible] consequence to me what [illegible] may say. If anybody [illegible] put spoons in a coffin he [illegible] of the story. Unless the [illegible] left open, how could he see [illegible] enough to say that I hired [illegible], and the carriage used by me when [illegible] a stable keeper there. The [illegible] were those I took to New [illegible]. They came in a vessel [illegible]. Yours truly,

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER."

Wouldn't be Flattered.

[illegible]—Monday's World prints the [illegible] Minister Logan. A letter was [illegible] which the latter is politely [illegible] much more natural and [illegible] of peace with Calderon [illegible] at Santiago, and if he now [illegible] let him be allowed to re-[illegible] and assume executive power, [illegible] under the authority of a provisional [illegible] and no trouble from internal affairs [illegible]. The meeting of congress [illegible] does not, in any manner, [illegible] of Calderon's authority. [illegible] the solution of pending questions [illegible] be arranged may immediately [illegible] the legislature. The World's correspondent [illegible] that this reply was ex-[illegible] his Chilian friends did not [illegible] to flatter Montero and cause him [illegible] position, and create disorder [illegible] in the Peruvian ranks.

The Indian Must be Civilized.

[illegible] Feb. 27.—A meeting to promote the [illegible] among Indians, and to enlist [illegible] was held under the auspices of [illegible] Indian association last evening, in [illegible] Presbyterian church. Several [illegible] were present. The association is [illegible] of women and has a national or-[illegible] auxiliary committees in a great [illegible]. After singing a hymn prayer was [illegible] Dr. Bridgeman. Rev. Dr. John [illegible] church, introduced Judge Van [illegible] of the meeting. The latter said [illegible] we consider to-night is a diffi-[illegible] we remember how much has [illegible] in the direction of good by [illegible] country, and all civilized countries, [illegible] this will prove too much for [illegible] speeches were subsequently made [illegible] was new was developed.

Carte on Wilde.

[illegible] Feb. 27.—Oily Carte, who arrived on [illegible] asked about Oscar Wilde, broke [illegible], saying: "Wilde, I think, ful-[illegible] in America. I am through with [illegible]. He called on me when in London, [illegible] I have not seen him since I left [illegible] London he is comparatively a non-[illegible] reported coming to America as an [illegible] nothing, except that as an actor he [illegible] not." In reference to his connection [illegible] Gilbert and Sullivan, Carte said: "I [illegible] week, a new contract with the [illegible] authors of Pinafore, for all countries, [illegible]. No one but myself has the right to [illegible] works, either already written [illegible] proposed. The success of 'Iolanthe' [illegible] wonderful, due, I think, to its high [illegible] it has succeeded beyond our [illegible]

We Don't Want Mexico.

[illegible] Feb. 27.—Herald editorial: According [illegible] Washington no action will be taken [illegible] reciprocity treaty at this session of [illegible], or any session of the senate which [illegible] after the 4th of March for executive [illegible] friends now apparently desire that it [illegible] over till next December. The two [illegible] defined there most of the conditions [illegible] with each other. There is [illegible] could or should deem more undesirable [illegible] to undertake than territorial [illegible] Mexico. Her civilization is very [illegible] our own, and in our immense immi-[illegible] and our half educated southern [illegible] quite as much incongruous material [illegible] it is wise for us to digest during [illegible] this century.

Salmi Morse and his Play.

[illegible] Feb. 27.—Salmi Morse will read the [illegible] of the "Passion Play" in the court of [illegible] this afternoon, when an examination [illegible] against him will begin. Morse [illegible]: "I shall also produce in court letters [illegible] I have just received from clergymen, [illegible] H. W. Bellows, and the Rev. Dr. [illegible], in which they severally con-[illegible] of the police and judicial authorities [illegible] suppress the play, and express [illegible] succeed in putting it before the [illegible] the justices to-morrow that [illegible] what they think at all. The New Stock Exchange.

[illegible] of the proposed new stock exchange: [illegible] mining, manufacturing and other [illegible] proposed to sell licences to a member [illegible] as did the California, Oregon [illegible] mining stock exchange, which for the [illegible] but did not come up to the expectations [illegible] promoters. The price for members [illegible] in the new exchange is $5000, while in [illegible] the price was only $1000, but [illegible] of these membership licences have de-[illegible] not be bought for $100 at this time. The [illegible] exchange is proposed at a time when all [illegible] exchanges are suffering from a lack of busi-[illegible]

Lowered Fifty-five Feet.

[illegible] Feb. 27.—The pumps are working [illegible] water coming faster than at any other [illegible] the emptying process was begun. At 8 [illegible] 55 feet below the original level. [illegible] been some talk of the employment of a [illegible] to go down into the mine and search for the [illegible]. The coal companies have received an offer [illegible] diver. It was decided not to use him, as [illegible] it would delay the work of pumping, and [illegible] be of any service. It is generally supposed [illegible] most of the bodies are half a mile from the [illegible] of the shaft. The apertures being small, it [illegible] be next to impossible for divers to reach them.

Nilsson at Garfield's Tomb.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27.—A touching scene was [illegible] at the tomb of President Garfield. Persons [illegible] Lakeview cemetery noticed a richly clad lady pass-[illegible] into the vault door, the sentry standing aside for [illegible] her. It was Christine Nilsson. She bowed [illegible] head before the tomb and looked long and [illegible] at the casket. When the correspondent [illegible] the turned at once, and in her charmingly [illegible] way, with glowing cheeks and sparkling [illegible] said: "I wonder why the American people, [illegible] to art and jealous of the fame of their great [illegible], have not, ere this, erected a monument over [illegible] resting place of this great man."

The Extradition of Sheridan.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The Times, on Sheridan's [illegible]: However glad we might be to rid our-[illegible] of him, it is necessary to say that authority [illegible] his surrender, as the general proposition [illegible] English and American position regarding [illegible] surrender of political fugitives, is the same [illegible]. If the British government has no other [illegible] evidence against Sheridan than attaches to the testi-[illegible] given in Dublin, it will surely be unable [illegible] to make a case of extradition which will satisfy [illegible] American tribunal.

Our Southern Neighbor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Tribune: It is very desirable [illegible] people of two republics shall become better ac-[illegible] personally, and that Mexico shall not be [illegible] unfamiliar land to disinterested Ameri-[illegible] few parts of the world which [illegible] compensation to any traveler in search [illegible] picturesque in nature and the picturesque in [illegible], for the difficulties and expense of a jour-[illegible] be reduced, since railroad lines are now run-[illegible] south and southwestward from the City of [illegible]

Fraudulent Commitment to an Insane Asylum.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Mary [illegible] Hoyt, daughter of Jesse Hoyt, committed by [illegible] asylum near Philadelphia [illegible] last has been released and [illegible]. She says she was put out of the way to keep her from her father's death bed, and will contest [illegible] on the ground of undue influence. The physicians' certificate upon which Miss Hoyt was committed was not filed. The physicians have been cited to court to explain.

Red Cloud Going Home.

OMAHA, Feb. 27.—Red Cloud arrived here to-day on his way home from Washington. He leaves for Pine Ridge agency to-morrow. He is rather reticent as to Agent McGillicuddy, who has been retained as agent. He is satisfied with his trip to Washington and his interview with the interior department, and has great expectations of getting pay for the ponies taken from him in 1877 by the military. He expects about $11,000 in cash.

The Sun's Opinion.

The Sun says: "Only five days remain of the forty-seventh congress. Many dishonest schemes are awaiting action. One of the most shameless of all is Horace F. Page's river and harbor bill. After a terrible rebuke administered at the fall elections to the river and harbor plunderers of the last session, it might have been supposed that Page and his associates would not have the hardihood to bring forward another swindling measure at the present session."

The License System.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—The common council last night adopted a number of ordinances greatly extending the license system. Every trade which could be taxed was assessed, the annual sum ranging from $500 per annum on brewers and distillers to $250 on express wagons. The rate on bankers, brokers and liquor dealers is not yet fixed.

An Indiana Failure.

SOUTH BEND, Feb. 27.—Lucias Clark & Co., paper manufacturers, have suspended. The firm issued a circular, calling the creditors together, and promising a statement of their assets and liabilities Saturday next. The mill at South Bend is one of the largest in the west. The firm is heavily interested in manufacturing.

The Death Watch.

At 8 o'clock this morning a death watch was placed over Michael McGlarn and Pasquale Majone. The sheriff has assumed charge of the condemned men, and will keep watch over them until the execution takes place. Four deputy sheriffs will be assigned to maintain the watch.

Makes a Statement.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Receiver Atkinson of the defunct City bank, published a detailed statement of the condition of the institution, as shown by the books. Liabilities amount to $635,127, $13,000 of which is preferred to savings banks. Probably the depositors will receive about 20 per cent.

On the Market.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—The subscription of six millions, called for by the Mexican Central railroad some weeks ago, is completed, the public taking $450,000 and arrangements are made for placing the remainder on the market.

Florida's New Railroad.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 27.—The bill incorporating the International Railroad & Steamship company is signed by Governor Trunk. The railroad will be built down the backbone of the peninsula to Key West.

Langtry.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The Tribune says of Mrs. Langtry, who arrived last night: "It is said she contemplates going to Canada. A must for Mrs. Langtry arrived on the Servia yesterday."

Honors to Diaz.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—Committees are being appointed by municipal and commercial bodies to properly receive General Porforio Diaz, ex-president of Mexico, who is expected to arrive Thursday on a Mexican war ship.

A Freak of Fortune.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 27.—Among the inmates of the national military asylum is Robert Vincent, at one time high a sheriff in Ireland and a prominent soldier in the days of O'Connell.

National Bank Closed.

LASALLE, Ills., Feb. 27.—The first national bank of Peru has closed its doors. The charter has expired. Deposits were received to within half an hour of closing.

Killed her Husband.

PORT HOPE, Ont., Feb. 27.—Bridget Bullen, aged 79, cut the throat of her husband, aged 90, and set fire to the dwelling. The woman has been arrested.

Heavy Weather.

Another High River.

LITTLE ROCK, Feb. 27.—The Arkansas river has risen four feet since Saturday night.

Heavy Defalcation.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A heavy defalcation was discovered to-day. Gilbert L. Crowell, president of the Empire Mining company of Summit county, Utah, was the defaulter. The office of the company is here, at 52 Wall street. Crowell, in 1867, was given the agency of the Talman estate, the owners being Mrs. Cornelia A. Atwell, her sister, Miss Catherine C. Talman, and her niece, Miss Caroline Talman. They confided to Crowell's care their securities, stocks and bonds, and gave him power of attorney to transact their business. In 1879 Crowell went into the Empire mining scheme, and bought largely of its stocks. The mine was a failure and assessments increased until finally Crowell abstracted $601,000 of the Talman trust funds. Besides this amount he borrowed from Miss Caroline Talman $40,000. In all, in the last three years, he has spent $774,200. In addition to this he owes $48,400. On the 12th inst. he made an assignment. His estate consists of real estate valued at $107,000, mortgaged almost to its full value, and $110,000 in shares of mining stock. Crowell is sick in New Jersey.

A very Foolish Man.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. — Joseph Parker, son-in-law and one of the assignees of Crowell, said to-day: "I expect to go to Salt Lake to-morrow morning to investigate the Empire and other mining properties in which Crowell was interested, to see what can be realized from the wreck. The real estate owned by Crowell in this city and New Jersey is covered by mortgages to the full amount of the claims, and the household goods will realize but very little, while the mining stock is worth nothing at all. There will be no meeting of creditors until I return from Salt Lake, which may be in two weeks or a month. Whether there will be a meeting called at that time will depend upon the result of my investigations in Utah, and also upon other questions. It is possible that Crowell may die. He is very ill, and in the course of a conversation I had with him last evening, he said he could do nothing to make good his loss. It has been agreed that the creditors shall not prosecute Crowell.

A broker said, with the exception of the shares of the Empire Mining Company, none of the stocks are wanted. That of the Empire is probably worth about 50 cents a share, and the others about 10 cents. There is no reason why a man of sane mind should embark in an undertaking at once so desperate and foolish as was the improvement of the Empire, and Crowell, although to be pitied, is universally blamed among mining operators for becoming a victim of such a manifest swindle. I was well acquainted with this man. He was always ready to share his last cent with his friends.

Where the Money Went.

NEW YORK, Feb 27. — The Sun says of Crowell's defalcation: In 1879 his attention was attracted to silver mining, and in 1880 he made a trip to Salt Lake City and California. He was seen in San Francisco in company with H. W. Van Praag, whose note he holds for over $93,000. It is said that Van Praag, who is now in Europe, owned the Empire silver mine, which is in Parley's park, Summit county, Utah, and that he induced Crowell to cash his note and take as surety a large amount of stock of the Empire mining company. The note was not paid and Crowell became owner of the mine. It was capitalized at $10,000,000 in 100,000 shares. He sold some stock to friends and relatives, and a considerable quantity was taken by the Tallman heirs. Then he tried to develop the mine, which so far produced no ore whatever. It lay just west of the Ontario and Last Chance grounds. There were surface indications of ore and work was prosecuted with vigor, but no ore was found. The mine was dug deeper and deeper in the hope of reaching ore, until, in January, 1881, the main shaft had got down 400 feet. A little later, according to Manager J. T. Cowles' report, the shaft reached the vein and the mine was immediately flooded. He attempted to drain it early in the spring, but was defeated by the burning of the hoisting works. The second attempt failed through the inadequacy of new machinery. The third attempt, with still better machinery, was successful. On November 1st it was found that the cross-cut had caved in, and it was necessary to dig a new one. The manager says 200 tons of ore, assaying from $50 to $86 per ton, had been taken from the 300 foot level. For repairs, new machinery, buildings and expenses, the sum of $430,694 11 was expended up to June, 1882.

ACCIDENTS.

Seventy Men Poisoned.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Tribune's Milwaukee special: A lumberman named Alfred Everson has arrived from Manistee, and reported to Captain John Fitzgerald that seventy men had been poisoned to death Sunday, in a lumber camp near Glenmore, Michigan. A new cook had just commenced work, and the first batch of biscuits he mixed with a can of strychnine, used to poison wolves. He mistook the poison for baking powder. The biscuits were eaten by every man in the camp, and 70 out of 85 died in terrible agony. No physician was near, and nobody familiar with antidotes were at hand.

WASHINGTON.

The Grand Jury Report a True Bill Against Dorsey's Counsel.

Ingersoll Continues the Cross-Examination of Beredell.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Col. Ingersoll continued Beredell's cross-examination in the star route trial this morning. Witness said the papers stolen from his desk contained the names of members, and present and prospective pay of each route operated by Dorsey. One of the columns was headed "T. J. B. 33⅓ per cent." and the figures set down in which column was represented the percentage of pay upon the route.

Ingersoll—What was it for?

Answer—You will have to put your client on the stand to answer that. Witness did not know, could only infer, what it was for; never practiced imitating Dorsey's signature in Kellogg's presence, nor did he boast to that gentleman that he could sign Dorsey's name so like the original that it was hard to distinguish the difference; the day after Vaile testified in the last trial, witness went to Wm. Lilley, a lawyer, and told him he was ready to go on the stand for the government, and rebut Vaile's testimony; also notified Dorsey of his intention; when witness

GOT OUT OF JAIL HE WENT TO LILLEY

Who referred him to Woodward; witness wrote out a statement which Woodward considered incomplete, and promised to see him later, and in the meantime witness was to collect his papers; Lilly told witness that he thought he could get him off if he went over to the government, but no government officer made any such promise; witness again met Woodward in November last, at Hartford, Conn., and made a very full sworn statement, Woodward paid his expenses. Witness said he told Blackburn if the government allowed him four challenges he would challenge persons to whom the government objected; he endeavored to carry out that agreement in good faith towards the government.

Ingersoll asked witness if he called it good faith sitting with the co-defendant and working for the government.

He replied that he considered it good faith to the government.

Ingersoll inquired of witness if he had not demanded money or fees of some kind from the government.

He answered that he had requested an allowance of $50 for counsel fees. Witness borrowed $10 from Vaile about a week before he took the stand. Vaile did not know he was to testify. Beredell said his share from one route was to have been $2000 per annum.

Dorsey's Counsel Indicted.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The grand jury has found an indictment against A. B. Williams, of the star route counsel specially employed by Dorsey. The charge is receiving stolen goods, based upon his action as counsel for parties charged with having stolen a watch and other valuables from Mrs. Ellis, over a year ago. Williams says the charge is absurd, and is the outgrowth of ill will of the department of justice, because he has taken an active part in the defense of Dorsey. The latter has written a long letter to Williams, declaring that the present indictment is an act of persecution against himself (Dorsey) through his counsel. Dorsey also asks in this letter that an attempt will be made to indict Col. Ingersoll upon the charge of defaming the department of justice. Williams thinks this idea is not seriously entertained, but says the department of justice endeavored to find grounds for such an indictment against Col. Ingersoll.

Fortunate Men.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Nominations: Register of land offices—Jos. Ferguson, Walla Walla; E. L. Smith, The Dalles. Receivers of public moneys—A. O. Marsh, Vancouver; John G. Pillsbury, Oregon City; Caleb N. Thornburg, The Dalles; George D. Davenport, Indian agent of the Sac and Fox agency.

Confirmations—Samuel C. Wingard, associate justice of the supreme court, Washington Territory; John W. Foster, of Indiana, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Spain; Wickham Hoffman, minister resident and consul general to Denmark; Dwight T. Reed, secretary of legation and consul general to Madrid; S. G. W. Benjamin, minister resident and consul general to Teheran, Persia; W. P. Sutton, consul general, Matamoras; L. H. Took, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Corea. Indian agents: P. B. Hunt of Kentucky, Kiowa, Comanches and Wichita agency, Indian territory. Army postmasters: Wm. E. Dargie, of Oakland, Cal.

Why he Gives Notice.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—It is believed that the statement of Judge Davis, that he will resign the office of president of the senate pro tem., at noon next Saturday, was prompted by information from President Arthur that he does not intend to convene the senate in special session on the 5th of March. It is understood that democratic senators will offer no opposition to the prompt election of a senator, as pro tempore president. Anthony, who filled this position from 1869 to 1873, and was the choice of the republican caucus in 1881, will not be eligible to election to hold the place, as his present term will expire March 3d, and he cannot be sworn in again until the next meeting of the senate. Although no caucus action has yet been taken on the subject, the indications are that Mr. Edmunds will be chosen president pro tem., and other officers will hold their positions until December.

Barrett's Reception.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The National theater was crowded to-night with one of the most brilliant assemblages ever gathered within its walls, to witness the production by Lawrence Barrett of Hon. Geo. H. Baker's play, "Francesca De Rimini." It met with the most enthusiastic reception. The curtain was run up, at the end of the third and fourth acts, four and five times respectively. Among those present was President Arthur and members of the cabinet, Chief Justice Waite and several justices of the supreme court, Generals Sherman and McClellan and a large number of senators and representatives. Barrett was serenaded this evening at the residence of ex-Senator Blaine.

Won't Filibuster

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. At an informal conference of the democratic members of the house this morning it was agreed that democrats oppose the amendment rules by which it was proposed to send the senate tariff bill to a conference committee, but a general sentiment opposed resorting to filibustering for the purpose of defeating it.

To be Cleaned Out.

The navy department is preparing a list of naval officers on duty at Washington and the length of time they have been here. Officers who have remained here for a long time seem to feel there will be a general cleaning out as the result.

Labor and Capital.

The committee on education and labor was authorized to-day to confine its inquiry to the relations of labor and capital, and to print the testimony.

A Warrant for Sheridan.

The secretary has, upon application of the British government sent a warrant for the arrest of P. A. Sheridan, suspected of complicity in the Phoenix Park murder, and it has been placed in the hands of West, the British minister. Sheridan is supposed to be in New York city. In case he is arrested, he will be taken before a United States commissioner, who will decide whether he is subject to extradition under the warrant. Should he decide in the affirmative, the department of state will issue the necessary extradition papers.

The Denver Riot of 1880.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Commercial's Washington special: The Chinese minister has not succeeded in obtaining indemnification for the Chinese subjects by the election riots in Denver, several years ago. The repeated demands made upon the government have been met with the statement that relief must be afforded under the laws of Colorado, if at all, and that the general government is not responsible.

Charges to be Made.

NEW YORK, Feb 27.—The Sun's Washington special declares there is a deficiency in the accounts of the public printer, and that formal charges will soon be made of corruption and extravagance. It states the public printer keeps two horses and a carriage at the government expense, and that the chief clerk and his own son also kept horses and carriages at the public expense.

Only 592 Bills.

THE RULES OF THE HOUSE.

Lively Debate Thereon. A Muddle and No Solution.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—In the proceedings to-day on the debate on the motion to change the rules of the house, Reed demanded the previous question. Blackburn raised a point of order, and prefaced his argument with a disclaimer of addressing his remarks to a futile effort to describe and fitly characterize the endeavor which the committee on rules had embodied in this resolution in order to escape the strait into which the majority had been driven that the question would come up if the majority saw fit in their employed magnanimity to allow a discussion of the proposition.

The first paragraph of the proposition had the effect of suspending the rules by a bare majority vote. It was a proposition to take away from the house the power of suspending the rules by a two-thirds vote. It was proposed a majority vote should suspend the rules for the purpose of taking up one bill, and limiting action on the bill to one motion and agree to the senate amendments. It gave power to take from conference on the bill not one sentence, one line, one syllable, which had ever been in the house before. The majority was unwilling to trust to a count which, if common rumor was to be credited, had been carefully made. The count made on the written agreement was signed by members. Though the rule was that the majority had marshaled its forces, yet it dared not allow a vote to be taken on a motion to concur in the senate amendments. He denied that the proposition could be considered, construed or denominated a rule, if adopted. What would happen if it went into the manual as a standing rule, to become in all probability functus officio within thirty minutes after its enactment? It was an absurdity on its face. Was it a rule of the house of representatives, or did it not practically constitute legislation itself? Could any one tell him the difference between the proposition submitted and a motion made by any member of the house when he lacked unanimous consent to take up and pass a certain bill? Or, to make the analogy closer and almost identical, could any one state the difference between this proposition and that of the member of the committee who, under authority from that committee moved to suspend the rules and pass the measure indicated by him? This order from the committee on rules of the house inquired whether under the pending resolution a motion to nonconcur might be made. Suppose one member of the house voted to non concur and 200 voted against it, did the gentleman then say one man could overrule 200?

Blackburn—I do say just that, and nothing more nor less. I mean to say that when a motion to non concur is made, if there be not a single man to vote for it and 253 members vote against it, their vote can not be counted because the gag feature of this resolution refuses to allow the bill to be considered. It is what Blackstone has denominated "A rule not of law but a sentence pronounced, and that without a hearing." Continuing he said he did not know he had any authority or even semblance of authority to express an opinion as to what was or what might be the purpose of any member of the house except himself; but sincerely he declared that he had no purpose of offering any obstruction or interposing any improper difficulty in the pathway of the house, if it meant to make an effort towards tariff legislation. He did not make threats for he had no purpose of putting them into execution, but he came to ask that the house, if it was to be stripped of its constitutional prerogatives to originate tariff legislation, it should at least have the privilege of concurring in what the senate originated. If partisan prejudices could be laid aside he could not but believe that the unbiased judgment of every intelligent man would force him to the conclusion that this proposition was a make shift to meet party exigencies, and could not be fairly incorporated into a system of rules of the house. If the proposition was agreed to, the majority would have to adopt the process of indirection by parliamentarian twist of the wrist, which would reach inside of the limitations of the law. The speaker said he had nothing to do at present with the question of constitutional prerogative in the matter of originating tariff bills. That question did not enter into the decision. The point of order was made by the gentleman from Kentucky (Blackburn). That gentleman rested his point solely on the claim that this resolution, if adopted, would not be a rule. It would be rather early for the chair to decide what it was. It was reported as a rule, and before the house; but passing that, it was perfectly competent for the house, when the subject was properly before it, to change every rule and all rules which had been adopted early in the session. A resolution had been adopted authorizing the committee on rules to report at any time any change of rules or new rule. That right of the committee had been exercised. Perhaps in this case this rule had been reported as a substitute for various propositions referred to. In effect, (if the chair could look to that), might be in this exceptional case to put aside other rules, except that providing for suppression of rules, but the greater certainty included the lesser. A rule might have been reported which would suspend, or repeal, or annul, or set aside every rule of the house standing or special, and if the house chose to affirm that report, it would certainly be competent for the house to do so. In this case, though the report might apply to but a single great and important measure, it seemed perfectly clear to the chair that it would be a rule to the extent to which it went, and perhaps the gentleman from Kentucky, (Blackburn), might see that in this one special case it went to the end.

The chair overruled the point of order. Blackburn appealed, and Reed moved to lay the appeal on the table. On this the yeas and nays were ordered. As it now wanted but five minutes to the hour for recess, that time was consumed in a confused, unsuccessful effort to obviate a night session. Recess.

On resuming, the vote on appeal from decision of the chair, was taken, and the appeal was tabled, yeas 116, nays 105.

Reed demanded the previous question.

Carlisle inquired whether Reed would permit the amendment to be offered which would give the house an opportunity to vote to concur or not to concur on senate amendments to the internal revenue bill.

Reed replied "No, sir."

Previous question was then ordered—yeas, 117; nays, 105.

Carlisle opposed the resolution in a brief speech. In his opinion it was a monstrous proposition and it seemed to him that friends of the measure would at least accord to gentlemen who differed from them the poor privilege of casting their votes according to their honest convictions. With that view he moved to re-commit the resolution to the committee on rules, with instructions to that committee that if they again reported to the house the measure should be so amended that the house might be permitted to vote to concur or nonconcur in the senate amendments.

Reed raised point of order that there was no provision in the rules which looked to recommittal with instructions for change of rule. He called attention to the fact that rule 37, under which recommittal was allowed, used the word "bill" and said nothing about "resolution."

Carlisle and Randall contended that the word bill was used in a general sense and included "resolution." Carlisle quoted from proceedings which occurred in the house on the 19th of January, 1882, to show that a motion to recommit had been entertained by Speaker Keifer upon a resolution of the committee on rules, changing the rules of the house.

Calkins called attention to the fact that no point of order had been raised against the motion to recommit.

Regan, in opposition to the point of order, read rule 37, stating that he would apologize to any other assembly than this for reading a rule which was so plain in its provisions.

Hammond alluded to a motion made some days ago by Haskell on the house tariff bill, [illegible] around the word "section" embraced in some cases an entire bill. Decision on the question remained secret, because the majority dared not ask the speaker to rule on it.

Haskell—I want to say that if it would result in tariff legislation I would force it to-night.

Hammond—Where is your bill? Put it to test.

The speaker said no precedent had been cited which sustained the right to recommit a resolution. The case cited by the gentleman from Kentucky (Carlisle) was no precedent; first, because the previous question had not been ordered; second, because no point of order had been raised against the motion to recommit. Quoting from rule 37, he held it referred in terms to bills only, and sustained the point of order.

An appeal was taken by Carlisle. It was laid on the table, yeas 125, nays 97.

Cox, of New York, then took the floor in opposition to the resolution.

Investigation of the Loss of the Wrecked Steamer Tacoma Concluded.

Decision of the Board Postponed Until To-Day.

San Francisco's Poverty Compels Her to Economize.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—Investigation into the loss of the Tacoma was concluded this morning, with the additional testimony of Captain Koris, in which he stated that he had no reason to doubt that any of his officers had recorded any but correct courses, and did not believe they were actuated by malicious motives. He admitted that the first officer was in error in the course he steered after saving Flattery rock, which was, notwithstanding contrary testimony, south by east, three-quarters east. Observations taken by witness the day previous to the disaster showed that the compass was about four degrees out, and when the course was south-east by south, the deviation of the compass was five-eighths point easterly, and on the south by southeast four degrees easterly; in his judgment the vessel was worth $350,000, and the value of the cargo was $12,000. On the conclusion of his testimony Captain Koris announced that he had no further witnesses to offer, and that, with a written theory of the loss of the vessel, the case should be considered closed. A statement prepared by him cited numerous instances where deviation of compasses had been recorded, also calling the attention of the inspectors to the fact that he had information that on board the United States steamer Powhatan in 1873, both the

STANDARD AND BINNACLE COMPASSES

Took a jump of two and a half points, which lasted an hour and a half, when they resumed their normal condition. He also referred to the case of Captain Rae, of the steamship Vasco De Gama, who noticed a difference in his compasses, near Port Orford, Oregon, and in the China sea, the latter lasting four hours, the time given being substantiated by Mr. James, a prominent insurance man in this city. He made a further point that all iron ships are subject to sudden changes in compasses, and that no amount of vigilance on the part of a master can guard against it, especially during thick and foggy weather. A great many iron ships are lost annually of which little or no explanation could be given by those aboard at the time, and why could not the same occur on the Tacoma, which was liable to the same influences. He concludes by stating that had he known these facts before, it would have been better, and might have avoided the accident. He claims that all measures of safety had been taken while he was in charge of the Tacoma.

The case was then taken under advisement by the inspectors, who will render a decision in a few days.

San Francisco's Poverty.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—Municipal affairs have assumed such a critical state that the finance committee of the supervisors this afternoon decided upon a bold stroke to enforce rigid economy as the only means of saving the city from serious injury. A communication was received stating that the fire department was without hay and coal, and that unless both were furnished immediately it would be necessary to turn out the horses to pasture, and close the engine houses. In view of similar complaints from other departments, the committee decided that all street lights should henceforth be extinguished, as there is no money in the treasury to defray expenses. A wholesale reduction of janitors was made, and a proposition entertained to transfer the funds set apart to pay judgments against the city to the general fund. The law library will be closed during the night, and all burners in the hall, with the exception of one in each passage, are to be removed. It is also suggested that the number of courts should be diminished, and a meeting of judges and supervisors is called for to-morrow, with the probable result that a vacation will be taken by certain departments of the superior court. Large reductions will also be made in the working force of the auditor, tax collector and assessor.

Opium Smuggling.

Recent large and valuable seizures of opium has been made by the custom house officials, who are unusually alert. Orders have been given by the surveyor of the port that all persons, whether officers of a ship, lady visitors or deckhands, who passed off the steamer Arabic, be subjected to a rigid examination. While carrying out this order, the quartermaster was arrested, and five boxes of prepared opium were found on his person.

Bold Leap for Liberty.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—Henry De Ford, while awaiting examination in the federal court, on a charge of passing counterfeit money, attempted to escape by jumping from the third story of the appraiser's building, receiving injuries which will prove fatal.

UTAH.

Disastrous Snow Slide.

OGDEN, Feb. 27.—A telegram from Teller, in the mining region of North Park, says the mail carrier on snow shoes arrived from the opposite side of the range, giving accounts of a snow slide that occurred at the Tupania mine, in Middle Park, by which three men lost their lives, the fourth having a very narrow escape. Four men, named Flinn, Doty, Williams and Booth were working on the mine at the time. The day of the accident a heavy snow storm was raging, and the men remained in the cabin. Without warning a vast body of snow broke loose and swept down the mountain side, carrying everything before it. The cabin was demolished, and its inmates buried under snow and debris to a depth of several feet. Flinn was the only one recovered alive. He was rescued in about thirty hours from the time of the catastrophe.

NOTABLE DEAD.

A Former Californian.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Judge Tichenor died suddenly at Orange, N. J., Sunday night. He was born in Orange in 1813, and began business as clerk in a general store, afterwards engaging in hat manufacturing. He then went to Ohio, and then to Texas, where he made and lost a fortune in business. When the California gold fever broke out he shipped on a vessel and worked his passage to San Francisco. He went to work in the mines, but afterwards engaged in business. Here he accumulated large gains and returned to the east in 1856. He had married three times, and returning a widower, married his fourth wife. He thought considerable property in Orange but lost the bulk of his fortune in unfortunate investments.

SPORTING NOTES.

A Bigger Man than Arthur.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Mace and Slade gave a boxing exhibition at the theater Comique to-night. In the audience were a number of persons of distinction, including several members of congress. Slade was greatly admired for his proficiency in the manly art, though the opinion was freely expressed that he was hardly quick enough in his movements to make a successful fight with Sullivan. A check for $2,500 was shown as forfeit money for the match with Sullivan, $5000 a side. Slade visited the capital to-day and was followed through the corridors by a large crowd. Even some dignified senators and members of the house left their seats and went into the hall to get a sight of the Maori fighter.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb 27.

Van Wyck called up the resolution requesting the president to communicate any information in his possession touching the alleged agreement of the ministers of France and Italy, at Lima, to make a joint effort to bring about peace between Chili and Peru, and to inform the senate whether the minister of the United States had been instructed to accept the mediation of the ministers of European powers. The resolution was adopted without dissent.

Cameron insisted upon proceeding with unfinished business. The bill to pay "Fourth of July" claims was taken up and passed.

Edmunds moved to take up the Utah bill.

Mitchell moved to proceed to consideration of the pension bills on the calendar; agreed to.

Several bills granting pensions to individuals were passed, among them bills granting a pension of $50 per month to the widows of Rear Admiral Beaumont and the late Major General Warren.

Mitchell moved to take up the house bill granting increased pensions to one armed and one legged soldiers.

Williams moved to take up the pleuro-pneumonia bill, a bill, he said, in which the people generally were more interested than in any other before the house this session.

Ingalls—"And one involving more monstrous and untenable propositions than any other."

Williams' motion was lost.

The increase of pensions bill was then taken up.

House.

Anderson said the senate was taking the position that it would defeat the postoffice bill rather than let the light of a little bit of God Almighty's justice flash down on these railroad companies. He hoped the conference report would be voted down, and the senate conference informed that it had to back down or it would get no postoffice appropriation bill. Dunn opposed the report, and expressed the hope that the head light of a locomotive would not always continue to be a lamp to light the footpath of conference committees. He trusted the time had come when the people could have a congress which could find time to serve them. The motion was agreed to and the report was lost; yeas, 114; nays, 113. Further conference was ordered.

Hiscock, chairman of the committee on appropriations, reported that the deficiency appropriation bill was printed and recommitted. The "Pound" rule then went into operation. He denounced it as a fraud on parliamentary law, and a fraud on all that was just and fair. It was revolutionary.

House said the report made by the committee on rules was a crime against the American people, who hold the party responsible which dared to commit it. It was an unblushing attempt to concoct, in the secret chamber of a packed conference committee, a bill. Never before, in the legislative halls of a free country, had such an outrageous effort been made.

Kasson quoted, ironically from House's remarks: "A crime against the American people." What was the crime? Taking $60,000,000 of the people's taxation and restoring freedom to the business of the country. [Applause from the republican side.] This was the crime, and God grant the republican party would never attempt to perpetrate worse crime than that.

Blackburn said if the resolution was to be accomplished, if this outrage was to be effected, republicans would alone be responsible. He wiped his hands of all responsibility, and would refrain from voting.

Reed admitted the proceeding was unusual in its nature. Unless there was a great emergency he should not be in favor of the passage of the resolution, and he thought the state of the country such as would justify the action of the majority. The gentleman on the other side, step by step, and day by day, obstructed the tariff revision. A majority desired revision. He desired revision, and a proper revision, because the business men of the country dreaded falling into the hands of a democratic house, which, in a moment of mistake, they had elected. [Applause on the republican side, and derisive laughter on the democratic side.]

A vote was taken on the resolution, and resulted Yeas, 120; nays, 20, democrats generally refraining from voting.

A point of no quorum was raised and a call of the house ordered, disclosing the presence of 255 members.

A motion to adjourn carried—92 to 96.

THE NATIONAL PARK.

The Proposed Lease to the Rufus Hatch Syndicate Meets with Opposition.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—H. B. Sackett, inspector general, has written a letter to Senator Vest, in opposition to the lease of the Yellowstone park to the R. Hatch syndicate, from which the following extracts are taken: "I would regret exceedingly to see extensive privileges of the kind set forth in the agreement given to any company. I am quite positive the traveling public would derive but few advantages or benefits through the medium of such a charter. On the contrary I believe the pleasure of a visit to these points of interest would be seriously impaired. The seven grants of land mentioned in the lease, could be saved by making a single grant of land to this company, and making the limits of the park the limits of the grant. Few persons

VISITING THE PARK

Would wish to remain longer than two or three days, either at the Yellowstone falls, or Yellowstone lake, or Upper Geyser basin. These three points are the great attractions. A visit of a few hours at either of these points would satisfy most people. After a few days' stay in the park most persons are anxious to get out to where pure, cool drinking water can be had. Large hotels would not be profitable, nor are they needed. All that is required is a place where a clean bed and a reasonably good meal can be obtained. This can be accomplished by ceding to persons privileges similar to those granted post traders at military posts, the trader to be given sufficient ground upon which to erect a store and dwelling, and at the expiration of his term of service be privileged to remove his buildings or dispose of them to his successor. He has, in no way, a possible

CLAIM AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

A single troop of cavalry, sent to the park two and a half months each summer, would afford all the protection needed for the extinguishment of forest fires and protection of the cones and geysers, and this could be done with little or no expense to the war department, and certainly none to the department of the interior. The first time I entered the Yosemite I made the trip on the back of a mule. Now visitors enter that famous valley in fine four-horse coaches. No extensive grants of land and extraordinary privileges were required to produce this great change."

Parnell's Speech.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—In the house of commons yesterday Parnell said the government has now a great opportunity to restore peace and order in Ireland. He was confident of victory, having a million of Irish in America behind him.

The attorney general for Ireland, replying, appealed to the house whether Parnell's argument justified his atrocious charges against the government of jury packing.

Impoverished Ireland.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Accounts from the district of Gweedore, county Donegal, in the northwestern part of Ireland, indicate the condition of the people as most distressing. WEDNESDAY MORNING FEB 28 1883

A THREE YEARS TEST

Three years ago this week the Indian training school at Forest Grove was opened. Beginning with fifteen children, the school has constantly grown until now its membership is above ninety. From the day of its commencement till now it has been an object of watchful [illegible] to the friends of Indian education and those who believed that any effort in that direction would be effort wasted. The children have been taken from the various north Pacific tribes from Alaska to Idaho and were not selected for special qualities so that as far as the material is concerned, the test has been a fair one. The experience of three years has demonstrated the capacity of Indian children to learn all things usually taught white children of corresponding age and their ability to apply their knowledge to practical affairs. It has demonstrated that they can learn to perfection the various mechanical trades and that as journeymen they can be industrious and faithful. It has demonstrated that Indian girls can learn and apply domestic discipline and skill and become excellent housekeepers. As students the Indian children have shown good sense, docility and industry.

The future of those children is now a serious question. The original theory was that they should be returned to the tribes from which they were taken, there to act as teachers. But it may be doubted if this is the proper course. It is not probable that even under the best facilities Indians however well educated would do better work in Indian schools than white teachers. Indian children hold white teachers in a certain awe which is no small advantage in the matter of authority and discipline. With native teachers they would naturally be on more familiar terms, and the effect of this upon school management it is feared, would be bad. But the most serious danger to be feared from returning graduates of the training school to their original homes, is that they would relapse into their former modes of living. The very facility which aids them in acquiring the white man's knowledge and arts, would, it may with reason be feared, soon transform them again into the degraded state of their surroundings. The better plan, it seems to us, would be to put them, as opportunity affords, in the way of making a living by the industries they have learned at the school, and in localities where they will not be subjected to the temptation of old and degrading associations. At best the battle of life will go hard with them. Alienated by color from those with whom their new education has put them in sympathy, and advanced beyond association with their own people, they will suffer all the pangs of proscription.

It should be the special care of the managers of the training school to impress upon the children under their charge those principles which will be most needed in the peculiar position in which they will find themselves. Besides the cardinal virtues they should be taught well the lessons of thrift. Each one should have some special and practical capability. The course taught at Forest Grove is admirable and could not be improved unless the school were situated where the children while still under the care of their teachers could be put to daily work in industrial establishments. For the good results so far secured great credit is due to Captain Wilkinson, who made this work indeed a labor of love. To the captain's zeal is due the establishment of the training school, and to his intelligent labors its practical and successful course.

BUSINESS CHANCES

Under the impression, probably, that editors have nothing to do great numbers of people write from the east to THE OREGONIAN asking about the country and the prospects of success in it. Monday night's steamer mail brought three such letters. The first is from a young Philadelphian, aged 26, who has just been admitted to the bar. He finds the profession overcrowded at home, and wants to come to the coast. "What are the prospects for a young lawyer in Portland?" he asks. To this young man, and many others like him, we must say that here, as in the east, the law is overcrowded. There are no less than thirty young lawyers in Portland, who have not yet become established on "a paying basis." The business of the country is in the hands of men who have grown up with it and into it, and a young man without acquaintance or business connections upon coming here might not for months earn a single dollar by strictly professional work. It is as hard to "get a start" in the law in Portland as in Philadelphia—so hard that a man without money to live upon for the first two or three years had better not try it. In the country towns, the chances are better. We know of several young men who having failed to succeed in Portland, went into the towns of eastern Oregon or Washington, and who have done well—that is, have made an economical livelihood and are in the way of doing something better.

Another young man writes from New York. He has saved, he says $2000 by several years of hard work and frugal living, and wants to go into business for himself. In the new towns through the country, there are always opportunities for successful business on a small scale. A man with even so small a sum as $2000 can easily establish a credit in this city and if he will be industrious and do business on business principles, can make money in "merchandising" in any one of fifty localities.

The third letter is from a bookkeeper who declares himself qualified by experience to "keep any set of books." Of this kind of talent there is always an abundance and yet, we do not know a thoroughly competent book-keeper who has not a position at a good salary. The candidate for a first-class place may have to begin in a lower position, and if he is industrious and competent he cannot help but rise.

Speaking generally, any industrious man with good health can not only make a living but something more than a living in this country. But nice employments are not always open, and unless the newcomer has means—no matter how thorough his capacity or elegant his antecedents—he may have to do work that will soil his hands for a few months. For men of no special qualification this is a hard country. The people here are active and have not, as a rule, time or inclination to teach new men and men with no experience in some particular line of work must pick it up in very practical and unpleasant lessons. Many young college men have [illegible] this to their bitter disappointment. For farmers and mechanics of all kinds opportunities are abundant and for men of capital this country affords a fine field for investment.

Herr Most is not a disease but a symptom. His opinions are abominable but still he represents his content. He is not dangerous because he is conspicuous. Danger comes not from him or his followers but from [illegible] from intelligent wealth. Representatives of all interests find seats in congress and the legislatures. In fact laws are made by attorneys, not of the people but [illegible] individual or corporate wealth. A silver bill is [illegible] by bonanza kings, a tariff bill is delayed by selfish interests trying to grab too much. Run the whole list through, and we find dangerous laws enacted in the interests of money. This leads the New York Hour very justly to remark: "Looking at the situation at the present time from Washington to Albany, it must be clear to any unprejudiced person that the Egyptian darkness of some of the gentlemen who are attempting to settle some of the most intricate questions in political economy and in government is equaled only by the triple-plated Jesse James dishonesty and rascalities of a large number of the [illegible] American communists. [illegible] infinitely more dangerous [illegible] the communists to [illegible] of the Albany [illegible] [illegible]

The [illegible] new [illegible] everything new. [illegible] the [illegible] paper [illegible] its value. The burden of this wail is that the [illegible] on the reverse side of the coin may stand for five mills, five cents, five dimes, five dollars, victory or for Vanderbilt. The [illegible] of this early [illegible] while [illegible] admiration is however unqualified [illegible] latest offspring of Uncle Sam's mint has [illegible] been [illegible] has ever [illegible] Arabic numeral [illegible] or finds the difference [illegible] Nursed on Arabic [illegible] discover [illegible] 5 on its face [illegible] impenetrable.

The [illegible] in England [illegible] and the name of every person who maintains any relation [illegible] performed any service which entitles him to receive a pension of more than $750 is annually published in the Financial Reform Almanac. Why should there be hesitation to publish the pension list in the United States? Every person who is entitled to a pension should be proud of the fact. The only ones to dread its publication are the swindlers whose names have been fraudulently entered upon the pension list. A decision of congress to publish the list three months hence would probably cause thousands of swindlers among the 285,695 pensioners to withdraw their names in order to escape exposure, and thousands of the nearly 300,000 claims now before Commissioner Dudley would be abandoned. The payment of pensions this year will be about $150,000,000 and the stupendous burden may become still greater unless something is done to terrify mere swindlers from the public purse. Bona fide pensioners are indeed entitled to all they can get, and more but they should be among the first to insist that swindlers step down and out. Publish the pension list by all means.

A while ago the New York papers were telling us of some apartment houses that were to be erected in fashionable locations up town, the design being to furnish respectable and even elegant quarters for families who would like such, but could not afford to occupy whole houses. One of these houses is now nearing completion, and a suite of apartments on the sixth floor has been sold for $35,000, the purchaser to pay in addition about $1400 per annum towards the running expenses of the house. This sixth story set of apartments covers 8000 square feet. It has a reception hall, out of which is a library 15 by 23, parlor 19 by 32, billiard room, 17 by 23, dining room, 19 by 23, and a balcony. Three bed rooms look out on the park. There are three others and four servants' attics, kitchen and offices. The entire house when completed will cost, including land, about $5,000,000. Evidently it is to be no place for the family of moderate means.

The fourth of July is a long time ahead, but if Portland is going to celebrate it, it is time to begin preparations. Not since the visit of General Grant, nearly four years ago, has there been a grand popular demonstration in this city, if we except the partisan parades during the last presidential campaign. This is indeed remarkable in a city with so lively a taste for "pomp and circumstance" that a fife and drum will at any time attract hundreds. A grand celebration would not only be a pleasant thing for ourselves but it would attract thousands from the interior. Who will move in the matter?

We learn that it is proposed by aggrieved parties in Washington county to prosecute Vandersal, the slanderer, criminally for libel. This would be very foolish indeed. The sooner the whole disgusting matter is dropped and forgotten the better.

[illegible]

[illegible].—Senator Morrill [illegible] the [illegible] notify the Hawaiian [illegible] treaty [illegible] the treaty [illegible] Hawaiian sugar [illegible] and the [illegible] the United States [illegible] by ratification of the treaty [illegible] the amount [illegible] pounds and the value of the sugar imported [illegible]

HAS BEEN LARGELY DRAINED

And [illegible] instead of the larger [illegible] being [illegible] Dutch standard [illegible] the [illegible] treaty [illegible] Hawaiian sugar [illegible] the [illegible] Dutch [illegible] all question [illegible] Hawaiian [illegible] of San Francisco [illegible] Hawaiian [illegible] and

INDIRECT ELECTS.

Upon the treaty [illegible] the committee say [illegible] everything [illegible] Hawaiian [illegible] islands are free of duty [illegible]

EFFECTING [illegible]

Is not small. The committee say further that it [illegible] of the people of the coast have [illegible] for the sugars than was paid previous to the treaty, and more than two cents per pound above the market price on the Atlantic coast; that the cost the United States in revenue by reason of the treaty for the past six years, is $12,[illegible] that the importation of molasses and rice is also rapidly increasing and

THE LOSS OF REVENUE

On these three articles for six years is placed at $13,717,136. This sum, say the committee, has been a clear and distinct loss to the sugar and rice operators to the Hawaiian islands, and they ask if instead of throwing this vast sum away where it can never confer any future advance upon the country it would not have been wiser to have bestowed it as a premium on the sugar produced at home. They add: "Whether or not we give a premium to our sugar producers, we ought them by a longer continuance of this treaty." The committee gave statistics to show that the value of all exports from this country to the Hawaiian islands during the past six years amounted to only $13,033,314, while the remission of duties on imports from the islands amounted to $13,717,136.

Coming to the political question involved the committee say that the power which is behind the throne of the Hawaiian islands is made up of sugar planters and sugar corporations, and that whatever political changes may occur in the course of time, Hawaiian products will find their only market in the United States, and this will forever

SECURE FRIENDLY COMMERCIAL RELATIONS

We require no fortified Gibraltar, nor any half way houses on any of the highways of the ocean leading to colonial dependencies. The time has come when any such foreign entanglement cannot be justified. The committee conclude with the statement that the reciprocity treaty with the Hawaiian islands is so obviously adverse to the interests of the United States that nothing less than its abrogation offers a sufficient remedy.

Senators Morrill, Voorhees and Aldrich, while agreeing to all points in the majority report, make a supplemental report in which they take the ground that the

PRESIDENT IS NOT AUTHORIZED

Under the constitution to make a reciprocity treaty without the advice or consent of the senate. They assert that such a thing as reciprocity was unknown at the time the constitution was adopted; declare that congress alone has the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and that as the reciprocity treaty bears directly on this question it requires the concurrent action of the two houses of congress to make such a treaty.

The minority also oppose reciprocity treaties on the ground that they are in conflict with the most favored nation clause in all our treaties.

Peculiar Arrest. Some time since Special Postal Agent Ben Simpson received a request from a postoffice inspector in California to look out for and arrest one Martin Van Buren Gleason who was charged with forging money orders at [illegible] Arizona and who was supposed to have one [illegible] reside in East Portland. [illegible] as he had two sons residing in East Portland. Last Saturday Mr Simpson met a man on the street in East Portland who answered the description of our man and arrested him on suspicion. He was found to be the party against whom the charge was preferred. He has been sick [illegible] some time. A year ago last October he received a notification from a firm in San Francisco that there was the sum of $1[illegible] awaiting his orders in their hands. He was expecting some money from a sister residing in the western states, and supposing that she had made arrangements with the parties writing to him to forward it to him, wrote to them to send it to him at Tombstone in postal orders. The postal orders came in due time and were cashed by Mr Gleason. It seems that he had some doubts as to whether the money was intended for him and proposed to put it in a bank till he should hear from his sister and ascertain whether she had instructed the parties sending the money to act as her agents. However as he knew of [illegible] same as himself in Tombstone he concluded it was all right. He stayed at Tombstone till last April and had not heard of any suspicion [illegible]. It appears, however, that there is an M[illegible] Gleason there for whom the money was intended and to whom the correspondence and money were addressed. He not receiving the money he was expecting instituted an inquiry which led to the discovery that his letter and money had been received by Martin Van Buren Gleason and a warrant was issued for his arrest. The prisoner is now lying sick at the residence of his daughter in East Portland, and is not in a condition to travel. He will be taken to Tombstone as soon as an officer arrives, if he is able to travel.

That Libel Suit.—Yesterday in the state circuit court was begun the trial of the suit of James Turk against the Oregonian Publishing company for an alleged libelous article published in the Oregonian of July 2[illegible], 1882, concerning the kind of business done by Turk and his agents at the former's sailor boarding house. Turk alleges that his reputation has been injured by the publication of the said article, his business damaged and his feelings hurt to the amount of $25,000, which sum he asks a jury to give him in recompense for what he has suffered. The defendant admits the publication of the article, but denies that Turk's reputation was damaged thereby, and offers to prove the statements made in said article. Messrs Yocum & Clarno are Turk's attorneys, and Messrs Bronaugh and Cyrus Dolph appear for the defendant. The jury who is to try the case is composed of the following named persons, G. W. Lomler, J. Zimmerman, Robert Gilbert, [illegible], O. Green, Almon Smith, E. [illegible], E. D. Bondy, [illegible], John L. Smith, G. J. Rose, B. F. Sonths, J. E. Robbins and A. Dilley. After the jury was obtained, and the case stated by the attorneys, the rest of the day was occupied in taking testimony for the plaintiff. All this evidence will [illegible] and will be given to the readers of The Oregonian when the case goes to the jury. [illegible] this paper refrains from comment, being an interested party to the suit, and not wishing to say anything that might prejudice the jury against its adversary.

Arrangements for Getting Seed Wheat.—The call for spring wheat for re-seeding in the winter-killed districts, and the difficulty of obtaining the same in Oregon, has placed many farmers in a difficult position with reference to re-sowing their lands [illegible] such that Gibson, Church & Co yesterday visited C. H. Prescott, manager of the O. R. & N. Co., and R. Koehler, manager of the O. & C. R. R. Co., and after explaining the situation, these gentlemen, with characteristic generosity and business [illegible], agreed to bring spring wheat for purposes of seeding from San Francisco to Portland for $1 per ton, which is less than the cost of handling. Mr Koehler declined any charge for railroad carriage to any part of the valley, and asks only to be reimbursed for the actual wharfage in Portland (75 cents per ton), which they are obliged to pay out. Not to be outdone, Gibson, Church & Co. agree to import this wheat from San Francisco and distribute it on the valley free of charge, except the actual cost of the same from first hands. The San Francisco quotations for wheat being about $1 95 per cental, it will thus be seen that California wheat can be supplied anywhere in the valley for about $1 45 per bushel, and an opportunity is thus given to repair the ravages of an unusual winter.

Police Court.—After the usual roll call of [illegible], W. J. Armstrong was fined $5 for backing his truck up to the curb. Both the city attorney and Judge [illegible] thought the ordinance unjust, but the law [illegible] while in force, so the lowest penalty was given the defendant. Four Chinese arrested for disorderly conduct by crowding the sidewalks [illegible] each. George Dunham, an orphan [illegible], was given fifteen days in the county jail for [illegible] from John Camp. The case of [illegible] for assaulting his wife Bridget, was [illegible] as the aggrieved party paid no heed to [illegible] to be present, the case was continued [illegible] to be made to secure her presence to day [illegible] as though the entire police force will [illegible] to accomplish such a feat, as she [illegible] made charge against her liege lord [illegible] a villainous looking highbinder, of [illegible], was held over to appear before the grand jury for bribing Kim Lung. The last [illegible] charged with larceny of money, was held in [illegible] to appear before the grand jury. At the request of prosecuting attorney Mulkey, the continuation of the examination of Wheeler, who [illegible] last week at the Palace theater, was postponed another day.

[illegible] His Duty.—Every day several thousand persons in passing up First street find it necessary [illegible] Alder street, and one and all are obliged [illegible] of the direct course and walk through [illegible] on account of a pile of rubbish at the [illegible] in front of Green's new building. The obstruction consists of an old empty box, a barrel and [illegible] cement or dirt of some kind. It is [illegible] in the way of passers. There is no [illegible] for its presence there except care[illegible] an utter disregard of the rights of the [illegible] portion of the sidewalk on First street is [illegible] more than the law allows of [illegible] occupied by material for the building [illegible] there. No one wishes to deny [illegible] every needed facility, but the public [illegible] right to expect that no needless or useless [illegible] should cumber our streets. The ob[illegible] alluded to is an unmitigated nuisance and [illegible] no useful purpose and cannot [illegible]. It has been there for a [illegible] altogether—and if allowed to [illegible] much longer the impression will prevail [illegible] Street Commissioner Braden is derelict in his [illegible].

[illegible] the Old Folks.—A little romance [illegible] which would fit well in some story, has [illegible] light in Couch precinct. Ed. J. Smith, one [illegible] most popular young men connected with the [illegible], became the affianced lover of Miss [illegible], daughter of John Hindlarb, not [illegible]. May was the month set for the wedding [illegible], with the full consent of their parents. A license was procured and extensive preparations [illegible] the ceremony. The other evening the [illegible] couple started out for a walk and the groom [illegible] to have the license in his pocket. He [illegible] the fact and how it all came about no one knows, but the lovers stepped in Justice Bush's office, and in a moment were made happy as man and wife. Then there came into both minds a [illegible] as to how this anticipation of so [illegible] an event would be received by their parents, but there was no cause for fear. The matter was explained, the romantic ones forgiven, and the happy couple are now receiving the hearty congratulations of their many friends.

[illegible] the Season.—With the advent of pleasant weather comes a renewal of the base ball mania. On the back streets may be seen scores of urchins [illegible] for membership in the Stars, and [illegible] clubs are being organized in all directions. The first match game of the season, so far as heard [illegible], was played a day or two since by the "Young Stars," consisting of Henry Carson, J. Garrus, W. [illegible], E. Bisbee, W. Young, H. Story, [illegible], M. Nemis and Alfred Eastabrooks [illegible] and the "Tossers," C. Burkhardt, J. [illegible], W. Myers, J. Honeyman, B. Pope, H. Myers, [illegible], E. Yost and H. Sutton. The game was won by the "Young Stars" by a score of 31 to 1[illegible]. [illegible], Sam Lotan, D. Buckmeyer and Fugue [illegible] as scorers, and as their tallies agreed there was no dispute about the matter.

[illegible] Pacific Time Card.—Under the new [illegible] the passenger train on the Northern Pacific, east bound, will leave Ainsworth at 9 5 P. M. and arrive at Sprague 2 45 A. M. Cheney, 3 [illegible], Spokane Falls, 4 20, Rathdrum, 5 45, Sand Point, 7 [illegible]. West bound the train leaves Sand Point 6 40 P. M., Rathdrum, 8 30, Spokane Falls, 10 15, Cheney, 10 36, Sprague, 11 55, Ainsworth 5 40 A. M. and connecting at Wallula Junction with the train from Walla Walla. Trains run as usual east of Sand Point under the construction department and connect with the trains of the Pend d'Oreille division.

Horse for the Hill.—Patrons of the First street railway who have witnessed the struggles of horses in dragging the cars up the hill with thirty or more passengers, are pleased to observe that within the past two days an extra horse has been furnished for the hill from Jefferson to Hall streets. It is not quite certain whether this has been brought about by the breaking down of the horses or by the fact that the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals was about to interpose in behalf of the poor brutes. In either case it is a change which will be appreciated by all.

The Kalama Branch.—J. B. M[illegible] & Co. contractors for the railroad work to Kalama are making every preparation to begin work within ten days. The bridge work will be in charge of [illegible] Hoffman, the grading under [illegible] and the system of accounts has been placed in the [illegible] of E. W. Bingham. [illegible] exorbitant [illegible] the demands of mill owners for lumber that [illegible] have decided to build a new [illegible] and cut their own timber. There will be no difficulty in securing all the unskilled labor wanted.

[illegible] Own Fault.—The money [illegible] at the postoffice is rapidly increasing, and taxes to the fullest extent the capacities of the [illegible] department. Especially toward the hour of [illegible] is there a rush, and parties who have [illegible] money orders at that time are in danger of getting left. A gentleman yesterday [illegible] much dissatisfaction because he could not [illegible] money order after the hour for closing the office. Some annoyance could be saved to all parties by not leaving such business till the last hour in the day.

Died in Havana.—News was received [illegible] day of the death of Dr Joseph Thomas at Havana on the 8th inst. Dr Thomas will be remembered as the head pharmacist of Hiesnauer's drug store [illegible] two years preceding his leaving here about three months ago. In a circle of business and social acquaintances he was very popular and many will regret to learn of his untimely death. His illness was heart disease, from which he suffered much during the last few months he was here.

Lunch Basket Festival.—Active preparations are being made by the ladies of Taylor street church for the festival which takes place this evening in the church parlors. Every one is on the [illegible] as to the nature of the entertainment, which will be something new and interesting. Above all a pleasant, sociable time is promised to all who attend. A choice musical and literary programme will be rendered at 8 o'clock, after which lunch

Wedding Anniversary.—Monday was the [illegible] anniversary of the wedding of Mr and Mrs [illegible], and though it was not specially [illegible] the evening was pleasantly spent. [illegible] There was a fine gathering of friends [illegible] Mr and Mrs [illegible], Mr and Mrs J. [illegible] Adkins, Mr and Mrs [illegible], Mr and Mrs [illegible] A. Smith, Mr and Mrs [illegible], Mr and Mrs [illegible], Mr and Mrs [illegible], Miss [illegible], Miss Fanny Millar, Miss [illegible] Spires [illegible].

[illegible] Affidavit.—Wm. Lawrence, who [illegible] for false imprisonment when he was [illegible] county jail [illegible] made affidavit to [illegible] Mulkey [illegible]. He further says he saw Hart, the man who was arrested [illegible] $2 to pay the costs. Lawrence will [illegible] that [illegible] lawyer told him he could [illegible] the [illegible] of the law, it [illegible] that he could [illegible] with impunity.

[illegible] Probate.—The will of [illegible] W. Lawson was [illegible] in the county court and [illegible] 1[illegible] worth of property of the deceased [illegible]. The children are Mrs. Mary M. [illegible], Mrs Harriet A. Leary, Jacob C. Lawson [illegible]. A. H. Waterman, C. Beal and P. [illegible] Pinkerton [illegible] $600.

Demolishing the [illegible].—Yesterday afternoon the board of directors executed a deed [illegible] the Portland Company for the Central school block and received their [illegible] Mr [illegible] check [illegible] Judge Marquam has let the contract for moving the building to P. H. Hatch & Sons, who will commence the work of removal to-day. The school furniture in the basement will be moved this morning [illegible] will probably continue in the building through [illegible] this week.

Wedded.—Yesterday morning Mr. J. J. [illegible] one of the young, enterprising, and popular merchants of Yakima W. T., was married at Vancouver to Miss May Swealland of that city. The couple came to this city and are registered at the Esmond, where they will remain several days. They have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Burns vs the Multnomah Railway Company.—In printing Judge Deady's opinion in this case in yesterday's Oregonian an error occurred in making up the form. The last line of the first column—"incurred, did not give the required bond and"—should be the third line from the bottom of the second column.

U. S. Circuit Court.—Judge Deady will announce a decision in this court this morning on the demurrer to the bill in the case of Shively vs Welch et al and upon the motion to strike out a portion of the complaint in the case of Daub vs Northern Pacific railway company.

New Patents.—Salemites are coming to the front as inventors, no less than four having received patents this month. Thomas Holman for a street cleaning device, J. D. Hurst for a bolting reel, and E. Huston and E. Squires for a driving cart.

REV. E. T. LEE'S LECTURE.

SUBJECT: "THE MORAL POWER OF NATURAL SCIENCE."

The Progress of Science a Progress of Moral and Truth. Scientific Study Strengthens Moral Sentiment and Affection.

[illegible] Rev. E. Trumbull Lee [illegible] delivered the fourth [illegible] "Moral Power of Natural Science." [illegible]

[illegible]

Nature [illegible]

[illegible]

In a word the more we reflect on natural science the more we examine into its exhaustless treasures of knowledge, the more we see that it is the revelation and exhibition of the plans and operations of an unmatched wisdom, the more are kindled feelings of awe, admiration and love begotten within us, which is the most sincere and earnest form of morality and piety.

Good old Dr Edward Hitchcock once said: "The temple of nature is a holy place for a holy heart; pure fire is always burning on its altars, and its harmonies are continually hymning the praise of the great architect, inviting all who enter to join the chorus. It needs a hardened heart to resist the good influences that emanate from its shrines. The philosopher should not forget that the religious applications of science are its most important use. These, in fact, transcend in importance its worldly influence, as much as eternity transcends time and bind it to the permanent, grand and eternal."

When the study of nature became the object of ardent pursuit at the time of the reformation, Luther said, "We are now in the morning dawn of a future life, for we again begin to acquire a knowledge of God's creatures. We perceive his wonders and his works in the little flowers. We do see in all his creatures the power of his word."

There was a period when the natural sciences were not diligently sought after, and then was a time of ignorance, immorality and mental opacity. Then cruelty and bloodshed held high carnival. Galileo, summoned to Rome, was put to torture for his freedom of speech in defending his scientific researches. The same narrow fanaticism that attacked Galileo laughed Copernicus and Columbus to scorn, and never will it be otherwise to the end of time, so long as error and not truth, the ultimatum of all science, and of all scientific inquiry, holds sway.

Had I space and time I would briefly speak of each of the natural sciences and attempt to show how each leads up to God and only brings nothing evident of God's designs, purposes, power and goodness, but what is true [illegible] is true of the natural sciences in general and we can say with a writer in the North [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] imagination [illegible] as well as any faculty [illegible] and is as susceptible of an increase [illegible] I maintain that a study of any one of the natural sciences under a proper instruction will [illegible] the imagination [illegible] ology, botany, astronomy, geology, chemistry [illegible] that it shall [illegible] into one broad bright flame of purity, morality and piety. Think of the imagination reaching upward to what is high, what is noble, what is true, what is moral, what is religious, what is divine, where the soul can talk with its Maker as it meets him in the rocks and mountains of the earth and in all animated nature. The nearer man gets to God the more exalted will he become. This I assume. But if a study of the handiwork of God reveal the divine author and source of all things and if natural science be the vehicle of our thoughts carrying us onward, ever onward and upward, nearer and yet nearer to God where can we apprehend, though not comprehend, the divine attributes and perfections, shall we not urge—nay, I had almost said compel—a study of natural science, that we may have a people of moralists [illegible] purity and piety? [illegible] We cannot as a people afford [illegible] otherwise.

[illegible] Another practical and beneficial effect of a study of natural science is that it tends to [illegible], develop and strengthen the moral and religious sentiment and affection.

This might be expected when a knowledge of the highest God is reached.

By contemplating the works and beauties of the divine hand and the wisdom of divine [illegible] seen in nature, [illegible] being strengthened [illegible] elevated [illegible] developed [illegible] The [illegible] clad hills and valleys, mountains [illegible] the sparkling diamond [illegible] and the varieties with which God has blessed the [illegible] are the [illegible] Happy indeed shall we be if we yield our minds to the heavenly impression, and receive the heavenly character engraved [illegible] with the point of a diamond [illegible] our heart. As the writer has said: "God has written on the [illegible], on the air [illegible] the flower [illegible] upon the raindrop that refreshes the sprig [illegible] that lifts its head in the desert, upon the [illegible] every swimmer in its dark chambers, upon every pencilled shell that sleeps in the caverns of the deep [illegible] that live in the light [illegible] he has written: None of us lives to himself."

Oh! if such impressions [illegible] characters on gray [illegible] of the young, that like the diamond their thoughts may sparkle and grow [illegible] moralty purity and piety. Such impressions create men and women [illegible] for.

I bow in reverence before the hoary headed philosopher who has spent his life in following up the footprints of God, the creator and upholder of our universe, and who has found the philosopher's stone [illegible] truth. Such a man is not wrong [illegible] when he says, "[illegible] truth, [illegible] pillars in the living temple of God."

THE CITY DREDGER

Visited by Councilmen and Others to Witness Its Workings—A Slight Accident Mars an Otherwise Splendid Exhibition

[illegible] Messrs [illegible] "Mackay" [illegible] C. H. Dodd, [illegible] Davis, Dr. Chance [illegible] Capt. [illegible] May [illegible] As the dredger was [illegible] wharf below Alder. The trip [illegible] and while the boat was [illegible] a year or two had wrought in that vicinity. The [illegible] where [illegible] frame of [illegible] rumbling [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] showed that the endless chain, with its 30 buckets, made a complete revolution in 2½ minutes, which at the lowest average of ¾ cubic yard to each bucket gives the amount of dirt dredged in that time as 1[illegible] cubic yards. All present expressed themselves much pleased with the working of the dredger, the performance of which far exceeded the expectations they had formed. While the dredger was at work she was being gradually moved across the channel, cutting to a depth of 26 feet and leaving a smooth level bottom. After working long enough to demonstrate that as far as dredging was concerned she was a perfect success in every particular, the bucket struck a tree imbedded in the sand which snapped a couple of links of the endless chain, which necessitated a stoppage to replace them.

The party then left and on their way up stopped for a few minutes to witness the workings of the Oregon dredger belonging to the U. S. government. It was found to be a very good machine, bringing up a bucketful of sand about two yards every 1½ minutes. The performances of the two dredgers are about as follows: The city dredger loads a scow containing 1[illegible] yards in 40 minutes. The government dredge fills a scow containing 92 yards in 40 minutes.

It was a matter of regret that the links broke, but such an occurrence can hardly be avoided when the dredge is at work among sunken logs. In any sort of river deposit except wood the machinery works effectively. Capt. [illegible] seems to understand his work well and is the right man in the right place.

[illegible] SEWING MACHINE

[illegible] Davenport [illegible] Justice [illegible] appearing for plaintiff and [illegible] for [illegible]. The evidence went to show that the White [illegible] company [illegible] sewing machine [illegible] that in 18[illegible] she, with [illegible] the machine at Short [illegible] Defendant afterwards refused to give possession without demand, failing [illegible] his right thereto by an unpaid bill of expense against Short [illegible]. The plaintiff, failing to obtain the machine otherwise, bought the title thereto from the company for $[illegible] and armed with a bill of sale again demanded the machine. It being again refused, he entered suit for its recovery. Counsel for defendant claimed his right to possession under the statute of limitations, which limits the time for suits of this kind to six years, and also that the plaintiff in swearing to the complaint committed willful perjury, inasmuch as it stated he was the rightful owner of the machine since September 1882. Mr [illegible] grew eloquent on this point at the expense of the plaintiff, who finally becoming riled gave him the lie and made a move as if to follow it up with assault or prepare himself for the consequences. He was quieted, however, by his counsel and after a pause the case went on. Plaintiff's counsel denied that defendant ever held peaceable possession of the property, and that there was no evidence adduced to show his rightful title thereto nor could there be any. The documentary evidence produced also established the title of his client. The case being submitted, Justice Bullock took the case under advisement till Friday next at 2 o'clock.

CHANGE OF FIRM

T. H. West yesterday sold his stock of general merchandise to Messrs Goldsmith & Cooper, two gentlemen of good business ability. They are selling the entire stock on hand consisting of dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps, furnishing goods, notions, groceries, tobacco, etc., at greatly reduced prices, preparatory to laying in a new and well assorted stock of goods of every description. Having the very best business connections in San Francisco and the east, they will be able to sell at very low figures. A call will convince readers of this fact.

HE SAT DOWN.

Adolphus wore his breeches tight
Of this he did not think
When he put on the roller skates
To show off at the rink.
His first adventure was his last,
He'll put on skates no more.
He tried to kick the roof all in,
And sat down on the floor.

When Dolphy dropped the girls all laughed,
It was an awful fall—
And when they had their backs all turned
He backed up to the wall.
He called a friend, took off the skates,
And, giving him the wink,
Said, "Jim, lend me that long-tailed coat,
I want to leave the rink."

KIMPER'S FERRY.

Sam Kimper was master of the only ferry that crossed Maple river between the mouth of that stream and the first ford above, so that his neighbors might have called him a monopolist had they ever known the word and its meaning. Like many another monopoly, the ferry was not a source of unlimited profit, for although the franchise and necessary appurtenances had been held by the Kimper family for twenty-five years, the family mansion was merely a log hut of two rooms; the one ferry boat was a flat bottomed bateau, just long and wide enough to accommodate a pair of horses and a wagon, and the motive power, which was always applied to the smaller end of a long spiked pole, was Sam Kimper's own muscle.

Some people who went to church said the "moving power of the machine" was whisky so bad that it had never even paid the income tax, and Sam not only neglected to deny this insinuation, but rather gloried in it. Everyone who had tried to persuade Sam to stop drinking had come to grief. During one of the great temperance movements that occasionally become epidemic in western states, old Parson Douse, of the Baptist church waded through some shocking roads to pay Sam a special visit for reformatory purposes, and he compared Sam, by way of compliment, to St. Christopher, the first ferryman on record. He was obliged to report on his return, however, that although he was accorded every courtesy peculiar to the Kimper family, he found Sam drinking rather harder than ever, and, that, far from being in spirit as well as in act a follower of St. Christopher, Sam used language that never was heard from a saint, except in the course of a sermon, and had actually asked him, Parson Douse, to play euchre just to pass the time away.

Sam was summoned from his fireside and pipe one cold winter afternoon, by a blast from the tin horn that hung on a tree on the opposite side of the river. He arose, swore a little, took a drink of whisky from a stone jug and poled his way across the river. He found awaiting him a light carriage and horse he had never seen before. It stands to reason that some one was in the carriage, but it did not occur to Sam to be the least curious on this subject, although those who rode sat in full view, for in sparsely settled countries horses are far more interesting than men. But as Sam, with his pushing-pole, walked to and fro on the gunwale of his boat, he heard scraps of conversation that roused him first to languid curiosity and then to a high state of excitement. He heard a woman's voice say:

"What will my dear father think?"

"He will think his daughter a very spirited girl, and be prouder of her than ever when he receives the notice of our marriage," replied a heavy voice, that was attempting to be tender.

"How soon will he get it?" asked the woman.

"Oh, within a week, without fail," answered the man.

Sam told himself that he did not like that fellow's voice. Then he stole a look at the man, and was sure he did not like the face. The girl he recognized at once as the daughter of a Doctor Ryte, who lived at a town seven or eight miles down the stream. Sam began to assume a runaway match was in progress; he also assumed the affair was none of his business, for which he was very sorry.

"Why should poor father be kept in suspense a whole week?" asked the girl.

"Why, my dear," said the man, "Cincinnati is a two-day's journey from here, and——"

"Cincinnati?" interrupted the girl; "you said we should be married at the first town we reached after crossing the river."

"So I did, but after thinking more carefully, I've decided it will be better to wait until we reach my home, where we may have witnesses that know at least one of us."

The girl began to cry, upon which her companion said roughly, and loud enough for Sam to hear, although he spoke low:

"Don't be a fool, Kate; you know I love you, so why can't you trust me to determine what is best?"

"Tell, you love me, take me back home before we are fairly married," whispered the girl, so low that Sam nearly fell into the river while trying to hear. "I will insist on father giving his consent on letting us marry at once."

"Take you back again?" said the man with a rough laugh. "Let a bird out of a cage after you've fairly caught it? Oh, no; I love you too well for that."

The boat was by this time nearly across the river. Sam ceased poling for a moment and said:

"Mister, the current's pooty swift to-day; there's a right smart freshet on. Reckon I'll hev to ask you to make the lines fast ashore while I hold the boat agin the bank."

The man handed the reins to the girl, got out of the carriage, and stood at the bow of the boat. Sam began again his poling, and when several lengths from shore he suddenly increased his efforts, so that the boat struck the shore with such violence that the horse stumbled forward against the wooden bar that crossed the boat to prevent accidents in just such cases. As for the gallant who was standing on the extreme end of one gunwale, he was thrown forward, at full length into the rough road that ascended the river bank. The force of the blow caused the boat to recoil a length or two from the bank, and Sam increased the distance by several quick pushes at his pole, after which he stepped to the side of the carriage, raised the front of his very bad hat, and said:

"Reckon ye don't want him no more, do ye?"

"No, no!" exclaimed the girl.

"Think ye can find yer way home alone, of I take yer to t'other side of the river agin?"

"I don't know," said the girl, looking very uncomfortable. "I've driven this way with father once or twice, but I've forgotten the way, and it will be dark before I can get home."

"Then there's another way," said Sam, and quickly turned the boat's head down stream, and began poling with great energy, while the man who had been so unceremoniously put ashore shouted great expletives and epithets that lovers do not generally use within hearing of their sweethearts.

"What are you going to do?" asked the girl.

"Boat ye down to the steamboat landin' fur your town."

"That will be a dreadful lot of work, and all for a silly girl."

"I've got a darter uv my own," was Sam's only reply, as he poled away as if his own life were in peril. In a few moments, however, he allowed the boat to drift, merely using his pole to keep it in the current.

"You must be tired," said the girl.

"Not a bit of it," said Sam, "I'm only slowin' up so's to reach there about dusk."

"Just what I wanted to ask you to do," said the girl.

"I thought so," said Sam, contemplating his pole with great interest. "I've got a darter uv my own."

Sam timed the trip so perfectly that there were no curious loungers at the landing to see a girl in a carriage coming ashore from a ferry-boat that belonged miles up the river. This time the boat was pushed ashore very gently and held there securely until the girl had driven out of the boat. Then the carriage stopped, and Sam saw through the gathering darkness a little ungloved hand extended toward him. He advanced slowly, to get time to rub his own hand vigorously on his shirt-sleeve. When he considered it fit for the courtesy offered it, he thrust it forward, and found it squeezed very tightly, and heard a low voice say:

"I am more thankful than I can tell. My father shall know of all this, and he will pay you handsomely, for he has plenty of money."

"I don't want any uv his money," said Sam. "I've got a darter uv my own. There's one thing I do want, though. Yer dad's a doctor I know him by sight; ef——"

"Well," said the girl, for Sam had paused.

"Well, you see if doctors don't know good stuff from bad, nobody does, an'—I don't like to talk of such things to a lady, but ef he could send me down a good solid drink of somethin', seein' 'twill take me two or three hours to pole the boat back, why——"

"He shall," said the girl; "if he don't I will."

Away went the horse and carriage and Sam jumped up and down in his boat to keep from shivering. In a few minutes the girl was back, and her father with her, and the old doctor shook Sam's hand until the stout ferryman ground his teeth in anguish. He brought a bottle of old brandy, and insisted on having two men to pole the boat back, with Sam as a first class passenger. But Sam said the brandy would be [illegible] useful as well as better [illegible].

"[illegible] I do anything else [illegible] you?" [illegible] the doctor. "You have saved me and my daughter from a lasting [illegible] [illegible] I [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] for the future [illegible]."

"[illegible] [illegible] kind of [illegible]," said Sam as he turned his hat and pressed up his pole. "I've got a darter uv my own, ye know."—The Hour.

THE FLORA OF ARIZONA.

The Quaint Vegetation of Rucker Valley and a Visit to a Hermitage—Taking Refuge from a Storm, among the Cowboys.

[San Francisco Rural Press.]

In August 1881, after the rains had partially subsided on the [illegible] of Arizona, Prof. Lemmon and his wife started on their third summer's exploration in Arizona. From observations from the train of the Chiricahua mountains the season before, they supposed that that would be a good range of mountains to visit.

After several detentions on the desert, they arrived at Bowie station in the night. Bowie station is a military post on the railroad, and is composed of but few houses. Here they expected to find a friend, and, when the train left, began calling for him. For some time there was no response, but finally a light appeared in a tent north of the station and a man emerged and asked, "What's wanting?" Out came another man, girt about with a belt containing pistols and cartridges, with knives in his boots, and then another, until finally there were five of them. Prof. Lemmon told them that they desired shelter for the night, and Capt. Tevis, a noted character of the region, vacated his own quarters and gave them up to the botanists. He locked them in and left them a brace of pistols, saying, "You may have to use them before morning."

An adjoining cabin was filled with cowboys. The storm which had been brewing now broke with terrible violence, and the water came down in torrents. During the lull after a clap of thunder, a voice was heard to say, "Let them mules alone. Git!" And in the morning they were told that the cowboys had endeavored to carry off the mules, but were discovered and stopped. In the morning the sun came out bright and beautiful, and they went out botanizing, up to their knees in beautiful flora. About noon the next day an ambulance came, as per agreement, from Fort Bowie, with Surgeon Ord and wife, whose guests Prof. and Mrs. Lemmon were to be.

They crossed a plain and then up through a wonderful pass, called the Apache Pass, which contained the only spring for many miles. Here the Apaches would lie in wait for the thirsty travelers and shoot them down. In this pass is a graveyard filled with little headstones, which read, "Killed by the Apaches, name unknown." The work of the Apaches may be understood from the statement that they reduced the population of Arizona from 60,000 to 10,000. This pass was now filled with beautiful flora and was a most enchanting place. They first began picking flowers and putting them in a press, then filled every available spot in the ambulance until, five miles before they reached their destination, there was room for no more.

They remained at the fort some three or four weeks, though they had expected to go south sooner, but were detained at the fort on account of the breaking out of the White Mountain Apaches. Their real objective point was to go on to the deserted Camp Rucker, in the southern part and highest point of the Chiricahua mountains. At length, having been assured that the Chiricahua Apaches were friendly and that they would be perfectly safe, they started out in an ambulance with a guard to protect them from the cowboys, and provisions for three weeks. They started on the 21st of September, the day of Garfield's death, which they did not hear of for 10 days. They met with numerous adventures, and arrived at 10 o'clock at night at a ranch house, where they stayed all night. They took an early start the next day for Rucker valley. The scenery became wonderful; they appeared to be entering an amphitheater of rocks. The rocks had assumed all forms; monks going to confession with the cowls over their heads, and in supplicating attitudes, and through all the most beautiful flora.

Prof. Lemmon bore letters of introduction to a curious old hermit, the only occupant of the whole valley, calling himself Dr. Monroe. That was their objective point. As they approached his cabin the noise of their feet stirred his hens to cackling; then the upper part of his door opened, and the old hermit appeared—a little old man with a hooked nose like an eagle's, a dilapidated straw hat over his right ear, long, fine hair, streaked with grey, and piercing black eyes. His clothing was half military and half frontiersman. He read the letter, and then opened the lower part of the door and invited his guests in. The guard of soldiers returned to Fort Bowie, but were to come for the excursionists at the end of ten days.

The hermit entertained his guests with stories of his life and his instruments of defense, which consisted of a certain tunnel, so ingeniously constructed that it is worthy of description.

At the back of the cabin some sacks were carelessly hung, which, when drawn aside, disclosed what appeared to be a cellar, but which really was the opening of a tunnel 120 ft. long, with a double elbow in the middle and a cabin at each end. The tunnel was just high enough for himself, and he was a short man, only about five and a half feet high. The bottom and roof were rough with cobble stones. The middle was enlarged to allow for strong defense. It was very dark, and unless one was acquainted with it, it was of no use to try to follow the hermit. For defense, in case he was overpowered, he had an arrangement of fuse, carefully covered over with rock and cobbles, which when fired would blow up everything.

This Dr. Monroe was a very intelligent man and had evidently moved in high circles. He had had some 23 different occupations in life, from playing the clarionet in a circus to teaching school in Virginia and practicing medicine. Hanging over the fireplace were not less than 12 hats, in different stages of dilapidation, and he was never seen without one of these on. He never put it square on his head, but always on one side. He kept cats and chickens, and when asked why he did not have a dog he said that several years ago he had a partner on a mining scheme, and they had a dog which was considered very faithful. One day the partner returned to the cabin to get dinner, and when Dr. Monroe reached it an hour later he found his friend dead. The dog had not given the alarm of the approach of the Indians, but had skulked off and hid. After that he never had any faith in dogs.

Time passed. One morning Prof. Lemmon was out botanizing, and Mrs. Lemmon was alone at the cabin, when a rider came up and said he had ridden all night to warn them that the Chiricahua Apaches had broken out and were starting for their old stronghold, the very valley where the professor and his wife were peacefully botanizing. He brought a letter from Dr. Ord and wife stating that they were powerless to help them, and advising them to secrete themselves in the mountains and they would come to their relief as soon as possible. It was a time of great anxiety, and they were hemmed in for eleven days before an officer came saying that Capt. Rafferty was but four miles away and would escort them back to Fort Bowie.

They reached Fort Bowie in safety with a great many plants. A new genus of fern was named after Mrs. Lemmon. They discovered many other new things, and altogether it was a very successful trip.

Settled.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Miss Mary Daniels, who presents a claim for $100,000 damages against the New York Central Railroad Co., for injuries received in the Spuyten Duyvil disaster, has settled for $29,000, the largest sum ever paid by a company for personal injury. A. B. Valentine, of Bennington, received $5000 for the death of a son and $5000 for the death of the latter's young bride, both killed in the same disaster.

Railroad Accident.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Feb. 27.—An accommodation train on the Milwaukee & St. Paul [illegible] was thrown from the track near Worthington, to-day, by a broken rail, and several passengers jumped out and were killed. Robert Morgan, of Stone City, and another named Maguire, of Worthington.

A False Position.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—The North German Gazette attacking Windthorst, leader of the clericals, says he occupies his position only by virtue of a dispute between Prussia and the vatican which dispute he determined not to allow to be arranged for settlement of differences, apparent in every word of the letters of the pope and Cardinal Jacobini, although they tried to obtain favorable conditions.

Modifying the Oath.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—The senate has adopted Humbert's bill modifying the oath in courts.

THE NEW ASYLUM.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

SALEM, Feb. 2[illegible]

The return on the last steamer from San Francisco of W. F. Boothby, superintending architect of the new insane asylum building at Salem, gives a [illegible] [illegible] that important enterprise and its [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the structure. The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] necessary to carry [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the board of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] San Francisco and eastern cities [illegible] [illegible]. In response to these inquiries they were the recipients of numerous estimates, which, upon examination, were considered too high and Mr. [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] San Francisco [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the state [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] for the first time introduced into this state, and dealers [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with the view of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. The state has also enjoyed the benefit of [illegible] [illegible] experience in these matters. Visits to the Napa and Stockton asylums having been made [illegible] [illegible] of seeing the [illegible] workings and essential virtues of many of the articles purchased. Experiments testing the qualifications of some of the articles have cost California thousands of dollars, and Oregon reaps the benefit of her experience, and in his selections Mr. Boothby has been governed by a constant desire to purchase the best article at the lowest possible rates, combining utility and economy in every article secured.

Contracts were made with the California wire works by which they are to furnish 150 sets of [illegible] insane window guards of quarter-inch wire, 2½ inches mesh and wrought iron frames. These are of the latest improved patterns and are rapidly superseding the grated windows of older asylums, combining as they do durability, convenience, safety and almost unobstructed light. They are made to fasten with a padlock on the inside and can be thrown open in the same manner as inside shutters. They will also furnish 35 [illegible] guards of like material, which insures light and free ventilation in every room. The guards for the airing courts will also be constructed of wire, neatly woven and securely fastened to the columns on either side, each guard being 9½x12 feet. The entire contract amounts to $6,794.11.

He also secured one of Van's patent ranges for the kitchen department, having two fires, four ovens, and twenty-nine inch holes. It embraces the improved steam tables, and all necessary kitchen and culinary fixtures and is generally conceded to be the most durable and complete range in use at the present time. He contracted for a patent rotary, reversible, power washing machine for the use of the laundry, together with a centrifugal wringer and patent flat-iron heater. These accessories are such as are used in the laundries in the eastern states and have proved very successful as labor saving machines. The boiler secured is 40 inches by 14 feet, with 36 three-inch tubes, and is of sufficient capacity to furnish hot water and motive power for the laundries, baths, cooking in steam jackets, drying clothes and wood sawing. Duplex, hydraulic power pumps already contracted for will be of sufficient capacity to furnish an ample supply of water for both the asylum and penitentiary and afford excellent protection against fire. They will be provided with patent safety connections and six hydrants, and will be constructed specially for the institution.

All patients' bathrooms will be furnished with Mott's patent cast iron bath tubs manufactured especially for hospitals and institutions of like character, and the lavatories will be provided with marbleized cast sectional slab bowls, and all stands will be constructed of marbleized iron. Three hot water distributers, 2x5 feet, will supply baths, etc., with hot water. Communication between the various departments will be secured by means of speaking tubes, with improved mouth pieces. The door locks for the entire institution were also contracted for and will be manufactured to order without delay. They will have but a single knob which will be on the outside of the door and will open with a key in the possession of the attendants. They possess all the merits with none of the demerits of the locks used in the California asylums and were secured at less than one-half the cost. The dumb waiters were also purchased by him during his trip, and are of the latest improved pattern, and not very recently introduced on this coast. These goods will be shipped with as much speed as possible and will be at once utilized in the completion of the building.

In view of the fact that the board of commissioners has been somewhat criticised for incurring the expense of sending Mr. Boothby below as their representative, it is but just to remark that the trip has proved a saving to the state rather than an expense. The articles purchased were, by close competition among the dealers and under the personal supervision of Mr. Boothby, secured at an expense of $1,350 less than the estimates furnished the board by means of correspondence with the parties themselves, and the state has actually saved that amount by the transaction.

RUSSIA.

Newspaper Suspended.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 25.—The Golos, having been warned the third time, has been suspended six months. On reappearance it will be subject to a clause of one of the temporary press regulations. In 1862 the Golos was suppressed because of its mischievous tone in discussing state institutions and describing the intentions of the government regarding reforms which have taken place in the last quarter of a century.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Wool firm at recent advances, and prices well sustained, with a steady demand from manufacturers. Stocks of both fine and medium grades are considerably reduced. Sale of Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces, 40@42c for X, 45@47 for XX and XXX and above. In Michigan fleeces sales have been 40@42½c for X. Combing and delaine fleeces in demand, and desirable lots of fine and medium goods met with a ready sale at full prices. The feeling is very general that no wool can be imported from London. Pulled wools are in demand, and for choice supers higher prices are asked; common and choice are quoted at 25@47c, but very choice lots of Maine and eastern supers were higher. Foreign wool quiet.

In conversation with Mr. [illegible], of the firm of [illegible], of Albany, to-day, we learn that [illegible] county wheat has suffered severely from the freeze. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] spring wheat for seeding purposes. It is estimated that nearly 2,000 [illegible] will be required in Linn [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. Messrs. [illegible] & Co. say, that the only [illegible] at the Capitol mills [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] at Marion [illegible] for seed. The O. & C. R. R. have agreed to furnish free transportation for wheat to be used for seeding, and the river lines will do the same. As only spring wheat can be planted now, and the farmers have now the bulk of that stored with them, it will be seen how difficult it will be to supply the demand. Should farmers be enabled to resow fields, there is every indication that a large crop will result. Holders generally of spring wheat will be the gainers by selling at a reasonable price, but should they evince a disposition to make every cent possible it will react upon them at next harvest. Millers have about all the available supply secured. Whether they can afford to let any large quantity go is a question, as should they run short of wheat to grind before next harvest their mills will stand idle, which is more to be considered than the question of prospective profits of grinding.

Butter in large supply, but held firmly. Importations of California will be lessened to ease the market.

The State of California brought 76 bxs butter, 36 cs lard, 8 cs hams, 1 cs bacon, 3 bbls pork, 25 cs cheese, 142 pkgs vegetables, 5 pkgs fruit, 5 cs figs, 67 cs oranges, 20 sks beans, 865 sks barley, 50 sks salt, 30 cs honey, 103 sks rice, 56 sks coal, 3 bbl flour sacks, 10 bl B W flour, 10 bl cornmeal, 81 sks meal and 14,000 fire brick. SLIGHT ODDS.

A Little Story with a Large Moral—One Man who Knew his own Business.

"No, my dear," said the [illegible] keeper of a country store to a [illegible] little girl, whose head scarcely came up to the level of the counter. "No, my dear, we haven't any red flannel, but we have some first rate New Orleans molasses." Sadly [illegible] that she didn't think that would answer the purpose quite as well, the child went her way in search of the article she wanted.

"Have you BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTERS?" asked a gentleman of a certain druggist whose name could be given were it desired. "I am troubled just now with a touch of my old friend, the lumbago, and the Benson's Plaster seems to go to the spot almost as soon as I [illegible] [illegible]."

"No, sir," [illegible] the druggist, [illegible] "but we have lots of plasters just as good. There is Allcock's, the Capsicum [illegible], won't one of them do as well?"

"My dear sir," [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] those articles, but I am a business man and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] what I want, and [illegible] they make [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the same thing. Experience taught me the difference. I'll go to the next man in your line. Good day."

Be on your guard against imitations. The genuine has the word CAPCINE [illegible] [illegible] in the middle of the plaster. All others are imitations. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

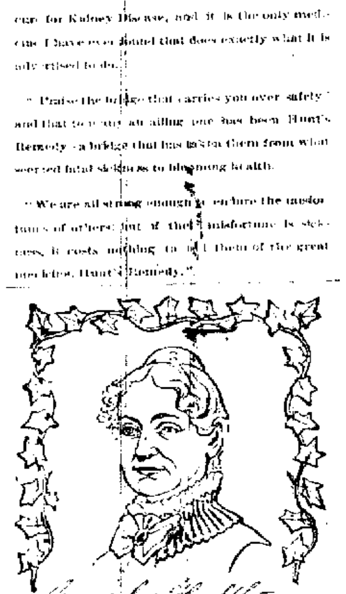
"CONQUEROR OF LIFE'S WOES."

Mr. A. W. [illegible] of Providence, R. I., says: "Deeming it my duty to suffering humanity [illegible] [illegible] who may be afflicted as I have been, of the safe and sure Remedy which, by the blessing of a kind Providence, has restored me to health, with deep gratitude I wish to acknowledge the great benefit that I have received from the use of the most valuable medicine that I have ever seen. During the past three years I have been afflicted with Kidney Disease, accompanied by the severe aches, intense pains, weakness and prostration attending this dreadful disease. I tried many kinds of medicines, including physician's prescriptions, without obtaining permanent relief.

"A few weeks ago a friend persuaded me to try Hunt's Remedy, and after using only half a bottle, I was relieved of the severe pains in my back, and continued the use of the Remedy until I am well again; and I now can take long walks without being tired, and I have an excellent appetite, sleep well, and am rid of all those aches and pains from which I suffered so long. I most cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy as a safe and reliable cure for Kidney Disease, and it is the only medicine I have ever found that does exactly what it is advertised to do."

"Praise the bridge that carries you over safely" and that to any one ailing one has been Hunt's Remedy—a bridge that has taken them from what seemed fatal sickness to blooming health.

"We are all strong enough to endure the misfortunes of others," but if the misfortune is sickness, it costs nothing to tell them of the great medicine, Hunt's Remedy."



LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

IS A Positive Cure

For all those Painful Complaints and Weaknesses so common to our best female population.

A Medicine for Woman. Invented by a Woman. Prepared by a Woman.

The Greatest Medical Discovery Since the Dawn of History.

It revives the drooping spirits, invigorates and harmonizes the organic functions, gives elasticity and firmness to the step, restores the natural lustre to the eye, and plants on the pale cheek of woman the fresh roses of life's spring and early summer time.

Physicians Use It and Prescribe It Freely.

It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach.

That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use.

For the cure of Kidney Complaints of either sex this Compound is unsurpassed.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S BLOOD PURIFIER will eradicate every vestige of Humors from the Blood, and give tone and strength to the system, of man, woman or child. Insist on having it.

Both the Compound and Blood Purifier are prepared at 233 and 235 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass. Price of either, $1. Six bottles for $5. Sent by mail in the form of pills, or of lozenges, on receipt of price, $1 per box for either. Mrs. Pinkham freely answers all letters of inquiry. Enclose 3ct. stamp. Send for pamphlet.

No family should be without LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S LIVER PILLS. They cure constipation, biliousness and torpidity of the liver. 25 cents per box.

Sold by all Druggists. (1)
